120 credit hours are required for graduation from USU, including 40 credit hours of upper division coursework. Depending on the number of credit hours that you have completed prior to being accepted to the major (either at USU or as transfer credits from another institution), you may need to take additional electives (between 1 and 36 credit hours) to fill the necessary 120 credit hours. There are minors completely available online that can be used to fill the credit-hour requirement. The Family Life Studies degree requires a 3.0 cumulative GPA to enter the program, to move to full major status after completing pre-major coursework, and to graduate from the program.
